

Please excuse my spelling. It has never been a good trait for me.

I was informed the FCC has introduced a new service known as Low Power FM or LPFM. I also understand this will effect some stations with translator services.

The question I have is, will this action only affect certain type of radio stations or will it effect all stations with translators?

Will PBS be affected, or the Talk Radio stations, or Christ centered stations?

I listen to a station that promotes honesty and truth, and respect for others, loves for others, giving to others, and a commitment to the community and the nation.

My station promotes self-esteem without promoting self-pride or vanity. No vulgar words are heard on my station, my 2 year old knees can listen without having to hear a word that I can not explain without having to deceive her nor change the subject. It promotes unity under one theme, and inspires thoughts of helping others, and thoughts of feeling good.

Why would any one want to stop a company, or group, or a radio station that tells its members or listeners love each other and to love and help out the ones that don't love them. And also to pay its taxes as required by law? To be a part of the community in helping with solving the problems and not to dishonor them self with making problems for the authorities and the community? Why would any one want to change that?

My radio station gives free air time to local not for profit organizations to announce events or promote there effort to help the community.

My radio station coast nothing to the government or the community, but it provides an overwhelming amount of moral support and a general feeling of welfare and security to the community.

My radio station is KLOVE. Please don't change this station.